C:\\Users\\Mohamed\\Downloads\\mp3gdal_2.3.1.tar.gz Select the "multiterm" folder in the folder you extracted it to and double-click on "multiterm.bat" and run it. - Toggle Breakpoints - Delete variables - Save and continue - Reload the script using CTRL-F5 - Now select the variable you want to look at, in my case, I selected the FIFO. - Open the Windows System monitor, choose the "Processes" tab, and select the process that is connected to the FIFO in question. - Check the "Create stack trace" button. - This will give you the line of code that is being executed at the moment you check the variable. - If the FIFO value is changed, you can see it in the system monitor and see the line of code that changed. This is how i solved the problem. Thanks. A: Finally i did it. Download the latest version from Extract the files. Go to C:\\Users\\Mohamed\\Downloads\\multiterm and then to C:\\Users\\Mohamed\\Downloads\\mp3gdal_2.3.1.tar.gz Select the "multiterm" folder in the folder you extracted it to and double-click on "multiterm.bat" and run it. It will automatically install the files for the current version. Select the "Multiterm" tool and click on the small triangle on the right side of the tool.

Choose the editor and the source code file. It will open the editor. Edit the text you are looking for and find where the last variable that is changing is assigned a value. Find the function that is being executed at that time and place a breakpoint. Set a breakpoint at the line where the variable is being assigned a value. Check the "Create stack trace" button. This will give you the line of code that is being executed at the moment you check the variable. Open the Windows System monitor, choose the "Processes" tab, and select the process that is connected to the FIFO in question. Check the "Create stack trace" button. This will give you the line of code 4bc0debe42
